Tourism has long been viewed as a key element of economic growth in Latin America and the Caribbean. With the expansion of aviation routes, first class hotel accommodations, modernized infrastructure and a changing digital landscape, it has never been as easy to travel to and within the region as it is today. A rise in inbound travelers due to a stronger U.S. dollar, combined with a steady increase in intraregional and domestic travel has called upon governments and the private sector to meet a growing demand. Modernizing the tourism industry in the Americas through physical and digital connectivity is a necessity for sustainable economic growth and competitiveness. In this roundtable conversation ministers, CEOs and experts will discuss the current state of travel and tourism investment, connectivity, safety and transportation infrastructure in region.

Session II – Sustainability in the Hemisphere: A Holistic Approach

In both developed and emerging markets, corporate sustainability and sustainable investing has become a thriving market. But more importantly, corporate engagement in activities that generate social and environmental returns is increasingly regarded as a prerequisite for success. It is estimated that businesses who incorporate sustainable practices into their strategic planning can achieve up to 67 percent higher earnings compared with companies that do not. Innovation, job creation, diversity, transparency and efficient use of natural resources are just some of the practices being considered by Latin America's leading companies. In this panel, senior executives and experts will discuss efforts to advance sustainability in the region and align their organizations with the common good of all stakeholders in society, as well as the role of partnerships and multilateral organizations in fostering a culture of sustainability.

Session III - Looking to the Future: Artificial Intelligence

Breakthrough technology is revolutionizing the way we live and how businesses and societies work. Artificial intelligence is all around us, from self-driving cars to virtual assistants, to smart home devices that can learn your behavior patterns. Artificial intelligence could also potentially help solve some of the most complex global challenges, from climate change to population growth and healthcare issues. As business opportunities for artificial intelligence increase and become a key tool for competitive advantage, how can leaders incorporate emerging technologies into their business model to benefit their companies and society? Top business and academic leaders will be discussing how artificial intelligence platforms are transforming the world we live in, while at the same time working together to better navigate the future.
